PLEASE do NOT approve Wal-Mart's entry into the banking industry. This corporation has a long and ugly history of skirting and breaking the law, and they are currently the object of at least 2 massive class action lawsuits for discrimination. This sort of financial instability and lack of responsibility spells potential financial disaster for investors and consumers, in particular, as well as for our nation's overall financial health.

Wal-Mart's inherent disdain for the laws of our nation makes them an unacceptable risk for handling any significant portion of this nation's financial resources. Banking institutions should demonstrate a track record and potential for trustworthiness and financial prudence. Neither federal regulators nor consumers can feel any sense of security that Wal-Mart would suddenly start respecting the laws and regulations made to protect our nation's financial stability when this corporation has such an outstanding record of flouting the law.
